SURVEY OF MOBILE PORTAL WAP SERVICES

INTRODUCTION TO THE Q2 2001 SURVEY

This mobile portal survey, the second in GSA's series of quarterly surveys, analyses the evolution of the WAP services of selected Western European mobile portals, with a selection of Eastern European portals also included for the first time.

With regard to trends, the frequency of the most popular services shows some maturity. The growth of services, such as news, directories and e-mail, slows down as they become what we call must haves. However, the nice to have category, i.e. services that are offered by many of the mobile portals surveyed, shows clear growth, indicating that some of these services will probably move into the must haves category in the near future.

A look at Eastern Europe revealed that in some cases there is still a way to go to the typical mobile portal "look and feel" on the web. On the other hand, the services offered were sometimes rather advanced in relation to the look and layout.

The growth of Mobile Portals represents an important development area, heralding many of the personalised applications and services envisaged as holding the key to the successful realisation of 3G in the future. The primary objective of this survey is to provide insight to the evolution of a selection of mobile portals, by looking at the WAP services they offer, with trends information and analysis. Results from the previous surveys are compared to the new data at the end of the document. GSA's mobile portal surveys are updated quarterly. The surveys are complemented by Special Focus studies from time to time.

This survey has been sponsored by GSA - the Global mobile Suppliers Association. GSA is the representative body for GSM/3G suppliers worldwide, encompassing the complete supply chain for the wireless telecommunications industry.

GSA's objectives are:

- To promote GSM/3G to operators, investors, regulators and end users, in new and existing markets
- To promote the evolution of GSM as the platform for delivery of third generation (3G) mobile multimedia services

GSA mobile portal surveys are available for download from the GSA web site www.gsacom.com . The Special Focus: Usability Review of Mobile Portals (March 2001), together with other materials, are available at this address for viewing and download.

We welcome feedback from the industry and invite your comments, which should be sent by e-mail to surveyfeedback@gsacom.com .

Main categories

The services and content provided by the mobile portals are divided into six main categories:

Communication and community – e.g. e-mail, calendar and chat.

Information – e.g. news, weather, directories.

Lifestyle – e.g. listings of events, restaurants, movies and games.

Travel – e.g. hotel listings, direction assistance and timetables.

Transaction – e.g. banking, stock trading, purchasing and auctions.

Other – includes information about personalisation, location-based services, device dependence and advertising, and also about the openness of the mobile portal, billing and target group.

Some categories include new features that are surveyed for the first time. The new features include GPRS promotion and/or its introduction. When looking at whether GPRS has been introduced or not, it is sometimes difficult to define whether the services are already actually used or just piloted; namely, if the introduction of a GPRS network is still more of a promotional nature. It can also be the case that the network and services are up & running but are not promoted at all. Therefore, the presence and/or promotion of GPRS have been included into one category, showing which operators inform about or advertise their piloted or daily-used GPRS services.

Another feature that is changed from the previous survey is the Gambling category, which in the previous survey was named, and only included, Betting. The new generic title Gambling now includes the Lottery and Betting services: the broadening of the scope explains the rise in the number of portals offering the service. Explanatory text of how to read the information tables per portal can be found in Section 2 this document.

Methodology

A mixture of methods have been used when surveying the mobile portals:

1. Direct access with mobile terminals when possible,
2. Access with WAP emulators (over http) when possible,
3. Information from the web site of the mobile portal, or from the corporate web site, when neither of the first two options was possible.

Evaluated mobile portals

The survey, conducted by Satama Interactive, covers 74 mobile portals representing 22 countries with a focus on European players. It now includes a selection of Eastern European mobile portals for the first time. The main focus has been on mobile portals owned by mobile network operators, but a selection of independent portals has also been included. There are also mobile portals that belong partly to both categories, i.e. can be totally or partially operator owned, but are branded and communicated and function independently from the mobile network operator.

The independent mobile portals represent a selection, including traditional news providers' mobile services, mobile extensions of web portals and independent, mobile-only, portals.

A list of all the mobile portals surveyed can be found in Appendix II at the end of the document.

About the findings

The findings of this survey are divided in two sections. Section 1 is an overview and comment on the results. Summarising tables of services of all mobile portals surveyed can be found in Appendix I.

Section 2 shows the individual development of each mobile portal surveyed. The development over time for each feature category can be seen, as well as the main services currently available in each category. For a quick glance at the evaluation of the services, the results from the three latest surveys (in this report 2H 2000, Q1 and Q2 2001) are displayed in parallel columns in the individual tables.

Summarising results of all surveys made can be found at the end of the document in Appendix I.

Restrictions

The methodology used in the survey brings some restrictions to the data available. When using the latter two of the methods mentioned previously in this document (survey conducted via web, not WAP) all the information might not be up to date, might be only a selection of what is offered via WAP or might not fully be accessible via the web. Therefore, it is possible that the data in the survey does not fully correspond to the actual situation or the services provided. However, the survey should give an indication of the development of the mobile portals.

The information gathered from the Eastern European mobile portals was often limited, therefore the mobile portals are included in the individual tables, but not in the summarising data in Appendix I.

SECTION 1 – SUMMARY OF FINDINGS*

Must haves

Services in the must haves category, i.e. services that are offered by almost all (approximately or more than 80%) mobile portals are divided into two main groups: the information and communication group of news - including financial news and weather – e-mail and directories, including search engines and phone directories. The “lighter” group of must haves includes general entertainment services – horoscopes, jokes etc. – event information, sports results, TV and movie listings, and games. Personalisation also seems to be a must have – personalisation still usually means configuring the WAP service on the web site, setting up a phonebook and similar basic services.

Nice to haves

Many services have moved up to the nice to have category – meaning more and more of mobile portals offer them. The nice to have category includes services that well over half (approximately or more than 60%) of the mobile portals offer. The most frequent services in this category are travel-related services, such as direction assistance and city guides. Restaurant listings are also often provided. Travel-related nice to haves also include traffic information and commuting timetables, hotel listings and flights information. Transaction services, such as purchasing (e.g. buy a logo or ringtone, access to Amazon WAP service etc.) and bank account information, were provided by around half of the mobile portals. Personal information management tools, such as calendar and contact information, were provided in well over half of the portals.

Other

Around half of the mobile portals offer services such as chat and other community features. The lately much talked about location-based services are offered by half of the portals. Gambling – now including lottery and betting - is offered by less than half. Actual bank account access for transactions is also offered by less than half.

The niche services, offered only by a few mobile portals, are multiplayer games, auctions and stock trading. The mobile portal content is usually designed and offered for mobile phones; few mobile portals offer services for PDAs or other mobile handheld devices. Another much talked about issue, mobile advertising, is still a rarity.

* Percentages indicate number of Western Mobile Portals surveyed. In order to make comparison with Q1 data as clear as possible, the non-European, Eastern European and two news providers' mobile portals have not been included in the comparative data.

The web/WAP synergy

It has been mentioned before, but it is good to note it again; that the information about WAP services and categories on the web site in general, and the synergy between the web and WAP channels are often inaccurate or not up to date. Features promoted on the web site were not available in the WAP service, or the information on the site was not updated according to what was available via WAP. The synergy would need improvement as many mobile portal users use both channels in parallel.

Billing

The billing conventions of WAP services require clarification and simplification. The current customer billing models are extremely diverse, ranging from payment for airtime to transaction fees per service and flat rates. It is quite often unclear to the customer how payment is broken down between services and airtime.

As more and more portals are opening up to customers from other operators, as well as allowing access via the portal to all available WAP services (including m-Commerce services), it will be increasingly important for portal owners to clarify the relationship between portals and content or service providers. They will also need to articulate a clear and sustainable business case for all partners in the value chain.

GPRS

Many mobile portals (operators) promote GPRS in press releases or advertisements, often with a message of being "the first" to introduce GPRS in their market. There were differences in how GPRS was promoted. Some operators inform about and advertise GPRS heavily, without giving clear information to customers on how to obtain and set up the service. Other operators that have the network and services up & running barely mention the fact on their mobile portal. Some operators state that they will not introduce GPRS before more handsets are available on the market.

Eastern European mobile portals

Rapid cellular growth in Eastern and Central Europe has led to a quick introduction of mobile portals and WAP services. Some mobile portals are very advanced and trendy, but some still lack the "quick and easy" display format on the web, or have neglected the web channel almost totally. Although the design of some Eastern European mobile portals may lead the user to believe they are not very advanced, the reality is that in some cases the services offered are quite advanced compared to the design. Entertainment-related services, such as biorhythms, betting, shopping, games etc. indicate that the selection of services offered by Eastern European mobile portals include more than the basic features.

Though innovative services were identified, many mobile portals offered limited or vague information about their services. Information and communication services such as news (including financial and weather updates), directories and e-mail were often provided. Entertainment related services such as jokes and horoscopes, sports news, TV and movie listings and event information were also offered by over half of the Eastern European portals.

SECTION 2 – FINDINGS PER MOBILE PORTAL

How to read the tables:

The three following columns with coloured boxes displays whether the feature has been present or not during the second half (H2) of year 2000, first quarter (Q1), and second quarter (Q2) of 2001.

The column on the right finally includes explanatory text about the features. At the bottom of the page general comments about services or content are added.

Summarising tables of the findings of the mobile portals are found in Appendix I. The tables show the evolution of WAP services during the time period of 1H 2000 to Q2 2001 (approximately one year). It should be noted that not all mobile portals are included in the summarising data in order to make comparison in time easy and clear.
